Interpreting the Bible (Perspective & Metaphor)
The Monroe Congregational Church, UCC

Homework Review

After session 4, you were invited to create a tweet.

Come up with a tweet of what you think about the Bible and write it in your journal (remember, only 140 characters). What was your tweet?

Perspective Exercise

Choose an interesting object and place it on your table. From one angle only, draw and describe the object – only from what you actually see in your journal. .

- Imagine that there were two other persons, sitting at the table with you, but seeing the object from a different angle.
- In your journal, respond to these questions: What is perspective? How was your perspective different from the invisible friends at the table? What is the impact and result of interpretation as a community task?

Reading the Bible as a Metaphor

You have probably played the Telephone Game with a large group in another setting. We prefaced these questions with the game. Respond to these questions in your journal.

- Questions for group:
  - a. How many people do you talk to in a day? How many conversations do you have?
  - b. Scholars believe that Jesus' ministry spanned (at the most) 3 years
  - c. Why were the conversations we have in the gospels written down? Why were they remembered?
  - d. We read the Bible metaphorically, we believe that it has symbolic meaning. The question "What can we learn from it today?" is very important in our church
