In Deep Water?

Luke 5:1-11

I recently learned that the fishing industry in Jesus' time was highly regulated. Instead of just showing up on the shore with your boat and net, you had to purchase an expensive fishing license in advance. So a night of empty nets and no fish wasn't just a disappointment for the average fisherman. It meant that the investment he laid out in advance could just float away, never to be enjoyed by those he loved.

When Peter, James and John left their nets to follow Jesus, they stepped out of a rigidly demanding economic system into a life of more freedom. Jesus offered them not just a change in their vocation, but a change in their very identity. You see, family groups often fished together, and Jesus pulled his followers out of that insular, family based life into a new community. When he told them "don't be afraid", he must have meant it! They were leaving their responsibilities and their dear ones for something completely unknown.

Jesus offers a new vision to Simon, James and John – and they accept his offer. The large catch of fish they haul in afterward is more than a just a miraculous display. It is comfort and safety, since it grants the families they left behind a cushion. As Jesus takes the men away from their work, he leaves their loved ones with a very practical gift.

Yes, stepping out of everything familiar into a whole new life can be frightening. But time and time again the gospel story suggests that even the most clueless disciple has the opportunity to show great spiritual courage. May each one of us, in our own way and for our own situations, courageously follow Jesus in 2017 and beyond.

In peace, Pastor Jenn

Sabbatical

As you all know Pastor Jenn will be leaving for her sabbatical in two weeks and will not be serving us as our Pastor during that time. This doesn't mean that we are on sabbatical though! In my experience, I have seen churches accomplish great things while their Pastor was on sabbatical. One church I worked with addressed changes that needed to be made in their By-laws. Another used the time to experiment with different worship styles. This is not to say that the Pastor stands in the way of these changes, it is to say that every church is an entity aside from its Pastor.

When we join the church that's exactly what we do. We don't join the Pastor, Music Director, Faith Formation Practitioner, Administrative Assistant, or any other staff member who serves the church. Sure, we form relationships and even friendships with these people, but the church always continues to live when these folks move on.

So, Pastor Jenn gets a much needed break from directly serving MCC, and we get an opportunity to explore and expand all that MCC is to us and our community. Keep coming to church on Sundays and keep serving the church – you never know what we might find during this time of renewal.

Peace and Blessings to you,

Debi M-K

Outreach

Pastor Jenn is collecting small trinket type toys and gifts for children and youth to take with her on sabbatical. In Middle Eastern culture (and many others), it is customary to give those you visit a small gift. They must be able to fit inside a pocket. Think tiny stuffed animals, matchbox cars, lip glosses, etc. in new condition.

If you can help, please drop items off at the church office by January 31st and thanks for your support!

The Annual MCC Tag Sale is coming! Please mark your calendars for March 11 from 9 am-1 pm (early birds at 8) in Wilton Hall.

Epiphany, 2017

Dear Colleagues in Ministry,

About 10 years ago, I attended a lecture at the Chautauqua Institution in which a professor from a nearby college discussed the similarities and differences between the spirituality of Francis of Assisi and Thomas

Merton. I don't remember a thing about the speaker's remarks, but I vividly remember one exchange from the question and answer period that followed the talk. A questioner asked the speaker, "Did Francis of Assisi want to reform the church?" The speaker replied, "No. He wanted to live the Gospel." The questioner then asked, "Did Thomas Merton want to reform the church?" "No," the speaker replied, "he wanted to live the Gospel."

This brief exchange stayed with me long after the other details faded away. When I'm asked, "What is the greatest challenge facing the United Church of Christ?" I always reply, "the greatest challenge facing the United Church of Christ is how do we live Gospel of Jesus Christ." This has been a springboard for many interesting conversations over the years. It is the issue that the church faces in every generation and that we face today.

Last fall, the National Leadership published new purpose, vision, and mission statements for the whole United Church of Christ. They are:

- Purpose: To love God with all our heart, mind, soul, and strength and our neighbor as ourselves.
- Mission: United in Spirit and inspired by God's grace, we welcome all, love all, and seek justice for all.
- And the vision: United in Christ's love, a just world for all.

For at least a generation, members and leaders of the United Church of Christ and its closest sibling denominations have experienced declining membership and participation, scarcity of resources, and reduced impact on the lives of their members and on society as a whole. Our appreciation of the value of religious faith and our love for the Church that has nurtured us have led us to focus much effort, time, resources, and energy on trying to "fix" the church. Based on the ways we measure this decline, our efforts have not been fruitful.

What if, instead of trying to fix the church, we focused our energy on living the Gospel of Jesus Christ? What if "how do we live the Gospel?" became the lens through which we viewed every activity the church undertook? What if, instead of asking, "how can we fill the pews or the offering plate?", we asked, "how can we get better at loving God and our neighbors?" "How can we welcome all?" "How can establish a more just world?"

Epiphany commemorates the ways that Christ is made known to the world. We can make Christ known to the world and to ourselves by committing ourselves to live as God calls us to live, loving God and neighbor ever more fully, welcoming all to God's beloved community, and seeking to establish a just world for all.

May the light of Christ shine in your life and in the life of your church during this season of Epiphany.
